Police Descend on W. R. Vermilye & Co., New York.

Charge of Fraud Brought, and the Authorities Say That Larceny Will Also Be Alleged-Transactions on Paper Only-Three Arrests Made.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5 -A raid which did not seem to be entirely unexpected by the raided was made on the "banking and brokerage house" of W. R. Vermilye & Co., at 52 Broadway, by Detective Sergeance McConville, Murphy and Sav-age, of Captain Titus staff. Three men, two of whom, the police say, are members of the firm, were arrested on the charge of grand larceny. The prisoners are James E. Carter, of 29 Morningside Avenue, George F. Newcombe, of the Criteron Hotel, at Broadway and Forty-first Street, and Arthur L. May, 331 Hudson Street, Hoboken. Carter and Newcombe are brokers, according to their own statement, and on the business cards of W. R. Vermilye & Co. they appear as members of the firm, together with Washington R. Vermilye, for whom the officers had a warrant, but who was not around. May describes himself as a clerk. The specific charge against the three men is the laveeny of $500. The complainant is Charles T. Pomeroy, an ink and glue manufacturer, of 55 Broad Street, Newark.

Mr. Pomeroy says that by fraud, which he can prove, the firm got something like $13,000 out of him. He says that he is one of many, and Capen'n Titus declares there are a number of complainants, one of whom will be on hand in court Monday morning to add a complaint of larceny to the complaint already made by Pomeroy. This man says he was swindled out Although there is a warrant out for Vermilye, and he will be arrested if found, the chances are that no action will be taken against him. He is described as simply a duminy for the firm, lending a name which is known throughout the im, Huzzah, 168; Blue Mint, Slik Cord, 162; Digby Beil, 161; Santa Teresa, Royal Arch, 160; Stuart Young, Dodie S., Burnett Wallace, 38; Miss Charlie, Outlet, Lysbeth, 25; Amote, 34; Miss Madison, 31; Blueridge, Zenith, 39.

The offices are on the second floor of the building on Broadway, and are handsome-The offices are on the second floor of the building on Broadway, and are handsomely furnished. In the charge of grand larceny against the three men. Fomeroy states that he gave them $500 to purchase January cotton. They gave him a slip, he says, stating that they had made the purchase from the firm of Leighton & Foulke, of William Street. On August 3 Mr. Pomeroy says he gave an order for the purchase of 5,000 bales, sending them $0.00 margin. Mr. Pomeroy says that immediately after these purchases cotton began to rise. He ordered them to sell finited of doing so, he says, they held on and then a few days later he received a notice from the firm that he had been sold short, wining out his entire profits and capital. Pomeroy alleges that he had made similar investments with the firm at other times prior to this, with the same result.

Captain Titus says he examined the books of Leighton & Foulke and found that no purchase of cotton had been made for Mr. Pomeroy by W. R. Vernilye & Co. on the $500, despite the sitp sent to Pomeroy. On the order for 5,000 bales of cotton given by Mr. Pomeroy, Life bales were really purchased by W. R. Vernilye & Co. for Pomeroy from Leighton & Foulke, Most of the transactions, though, says Captain Titus, were on pager only.

Captain Titus believes that Alfred Gosling, of Dean bucketshop fame, is behind the Vermilye firm.

piay ball during the winter, will engage in a series of four games with the Cap-ital City and the Census Office Clubs at the American League Park next week. The Cuban X Guants have an excellent reputation as clever ball players, and as the local men are also able to put up a good game it is expected that the forth-coming contests will be of more than ordinary interest. Upon his arrival there the surgeons diswered upon examination that the child was badly brulsed about the head and body, and it is feared that he is also internally injured. Corliss, the driver of the team, was arrested and taken to the Eighth precinct station, where a charge of assault and battery was preferred against him by Percy Grant, the finher of the injured boy. A score of witnesses have been secured by the police and will testify in the case when the boy's condition permits of a hearing in Police Court. With Corliss in the vehicle was Patrick Quigley, a horse trader, who jumped, it is alleged, from the buggy and ran when the accident occurred. Corliss, who was driving, haited the team and rendered all possible assistance, it is said, to the injured child. The police have secured Quigley's description and a sharp lookout will be kept for him throughout the city. At a late hour last night the surgeons at the Homeopathic Hospital stated that the boy was in as good a condition as could be expected and that he was resting easily. NEWS FROM ALEXANDRIA.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Oct. 5 .- Mrs. Rossevelt, wife of the President, and three of their children come over on the ferryboat, arriving fif this city at 4 o'clock this afternoon in a surrey with two horses, driven by a coachman. They drove up King Street and proceeded to historic old Christ Church, where Washington worshipped. After entering the yard of the church Mrs. Roosevelt gave her name to Sexton James Dean, who escorted her through the church and showed her the pews formerly occupied by Washington and Lee. She then visited the tombstones of historic interest in the cemetery that surrounds the church. Mr. Dean pointed out to her those of the greatest age, which were viewed by her and the children with a keen interest. Mrs. Roosevelt spent about half an hour church. These were Sexton Dean, Gatekeeper Bullock, and a citizen. After leaving the cemetery the distinguished visitors drove out Columbus Street and returned to Washington by way of Arlington, over the Aqueduct Bridge. Be-fore leaving the church Mrs. Roosevelt graciously bid those present good-bye. Had it not been for the fact that Mrs. Roosevelt made her name known she would not have been recognized. No one on the streets recognized Mrs. Roosevelt. This was the first direct visit from the White Hous; since the Hayes Administra-James Dubleday, of Alexandria Coun-

Waters returned the amount of money to Mrs. Pennett, whereupon that case was dismissed. Mr. McCuen also withdrew his clearge against the prisoner and he was released. Mrs. Pennett this morning, in the Police Court, told the same story as she told Policeman Sherwood yesterday when she made the complaint, with the exception of saging that the prisoner did not forcibly take the money from her, but that she gave it to him upon his promise to return it.

on the river bank and the eagles were using it to feed their young. One morning the eagles were serving breakfast to their young and one of them had flown up to the next with a lot of pieces of sturgeon and the other was tearing away at the huge fish, when the bear came crashing through the brush to find the sturgeon he had secarted. Bruin wasked straight up to the fish. But the eagle was not to be had scented. Brain walked straight up to the fish. But the eagle was not to be scared and he flapped his wings and stood on the defensive.

Big, fat sturgeon do not come ashore along the Columbia so frequently as they used to and the carcass of this one was a prize, and it rightfully belonged to the caseless as the original discoverers. The bear paused a moment and then rushed at the eagle, which gracefully cluded him and, soaring a short distance in the air, screamed bloody murder as a signal to his mair. She came swooping down from the nest and joined forces with her mate in an attack on the bear, which was so busy tearing the sturgeon that he paid no attention to the royal birds till they landed like thunderbolts on his neck and rump and sank their t. ans in his flesh.

The talons of a joll-grown eagle are not to be sneezed at even by a bear, and the howl of rage bruin tet out showed that he howl of rage bruin tet out showed that he had been both pained and hurt. He reared up on his haunches and clawed savagely at the birds, which whired agilely about him. One would make a dash at his face and eyes and the other would hit him in the back of the neck like a catapult. For ten minutes or so the bear stood up to the "scratch" and when he had scratching enough he began to show signs of wanting to get away. He did not exactly show the white feathers, but he began edging off toward the brush, which was fifty feet distant.

As soon as he was on all fours the cargles were on him, and he would have to get on his haunches to use his paws effect ively. The blood was streaming down his face and showed in spots all over his glossy hide, but the great object of the eagles appeared to be to get at bruin's eyes, and he seemed to be aware of this and was very anxhous to get under the protection of the brush. The eagles were evidently just as anxious to prevent this. When bruin turned his head toward the bushes they would plump down on his head and try to sink their talons in his eyes or to dig them out with their strong philons until the poor bear did not know "where he was at."

All this time Larsen was sitting quietly in his boat watching what he says was the most savage and entertaining fight he has ever seen. It was, he judges, nearly half an hour from the time the bear came out of the brush till he was able to drag himself back under its friendly cover, where the eagles could not get at him, and he was the most dilapidated-looking hear imaginable. The eagles flew up on a tree and smoothed their milled plumage and congratulated each other on the outcome of the struggle. Then, as their eaglets were squawking for more breakfast, they resumed their work of carving and serving their sturgeon, and until it was all used up, which took several days, no animal offered to approach it, in the day-time at least.—Portland Oregonian.

(From the Detroit Free Press.) "Can I coulde to you my accret sorrow, Arabella?"
"Yes, Arthur, if it's a new one; if it's that same old one, I haven't time." THE PINK OF YELLOWNESS.

Newfoundland Editors Learned in the Art of Vituperation.

Unsavory Journalism in the Cana. dian Province-Newspapers Which Term Cabinet Officers "Skunks." "Dirty Drunkards," and "Swine." There are three daily papers in John's and two of them are pink. I tried to discover why Newfoundland prefers for its newspapers a color that Americans associate with barroom literature, and a chance acquaintance at the City Club gave me that very c aclusive reply, "I don't know; it has always been so." That, I have learned, in this most pro-in the church and cemetery.

At the time Mrs. Roosevelt was present there were only three people at the glish cities, is a reason against which it is useless to argue—it is the very best reason for anything whatsoever. So I turned to one of the publishers who are directly responsible for the deluge of sickly pale pink that falls upon St. John's every afternoon. He could not enlighten me further than to say: "It was so in the beginning; I don't know what reason animated the first publisher who used it. And so this study of the pink journalism of St. John's must omit the genesis chap-ter. Nobody created it; like Topsy, "It just growed." I shall always remember the Newfound-

ter. Nobody created it; like Topsy, "it just growed."

I shall always remember the Newfoundland papers as proof that truth is stranger than fiction. Americans are familiar with the "Arizona Kicker," the "Jaybawk Clarion," the "Wayback Howler," The Thomas Cat," and the other ficitious creations which the American humorists use as the vehicle for their most impossible absurdities; but I am sure no American humorists in his wildest flights ever accomplished anything quite so grotesquely picturesque as the things I shall here reproduce, verbatim et literatum, wens, deformities, monstrosities, and all, as the result of two weeks' casual glancing over the St. John's papers.

Humor is not the essential quality of all these quotations. I might well reproduce them without comment and let them speak for themselves, but there are some things I hesitate to reproduce, even in quotation marks, even as "horrible examples," without a word of caution to the reader. But first, I should say, the man of whom the following is said is not an obscure police court habitue, nor a common criminal; he is a conspicuous citizen of Newfoundland, known by name to all, and by sight to half the people of the island. I disguise his name under the long-enduring cloak of the Jones family, but I may say he is the Newfoundland Minister of Marines and Fisheries, occupying a position in the community corresponding to our Secretary of the Navy. But here is the paragraph:

'It was not without cause that Jones was named the 'great unwashed,' the 'malodorous,' the 'stunk.' Jones washes himself about twice a year, and under ordinary circumstances cannot be approached within fifty yards. EAGLES WHIP A BEAR.

Novel Fight Over the Possession of a Piece of Carrion.

A fight to a finish between a pair of eagles and a hear few persons have seen, and the sportfest sport on the turf would hardly know which to bet on in such a combat. Hans Larsen, a Norwegian fisherman who has been fishing for salmon, saw a desperate fight between two fine bald engles that had their nest not far from his camp and a half-grown bear. The eagleg won.

A huge sturgeon had been washed up on the river bank and the eagles were serving breakfast to their young and one of them had flown up to the river bank and the eagles were away at the huge fish, when the verification of the fish, when the verification of the fish, but the eagle was not to be scared and be flaupoed his wings and stood the fish. affilteration, but which illustrates well the fraternal amenatics of pink journalism in St. John's:

"For the information of the Teiegram' we might state it was not Tom the Joker' who gave our reporter the acts about the salimon specied by E. Sheshan near Browning's Bridge last week. The flash was exactly the same length as the cars of the bearded donkey of the Teiegram, who since being turned out of Tom's store last week, now avoids it."

And here are a few of the epithets which I find in use when the pink editor begins to pay his respects to his political opponents:

Larry, the rat."

"Dirty Cabbage Brown."

"The pulsied brat."

"A miserable vendor of rum and molinises."

"Dirty Cabbage Brown,"

"The pulsied brat."

"A miserable vender of rum and moliasses."

The following extracts from a pink assault on Hon. Robert Hond are reproduced, not because they represent my or anyhody else's same judgment as to the kind of man the Newfoundland Premier is, but simply as an example of one of the lower depths of St. John's journalism. Pray note, by the way, the alliterations:

"In the Assembly yesterday Mr. Bond, the opposition leader, mide a cowardly and unprovoked attack upon this paper and upon its editor. In this he gave only another proof that he is a dustard and a coward,  * But the fact is, Bond wanted to get a blow in at the "Heralis" editor for well-deserved trouncings administered to this inflated windbag during the election campaign. However, we don't propose to stand any nonsense from Bond or any other bumptious blather-skite," we have too much contempt for him. He is a monumental fraud, whose political success is due more to his pocketbook than to his principles. A second-rate phrase-maker whose reputation for oratory is due to 'persistent plagiarism,' he has succeeded in getting a few hundred people to believe in him and a mercenary mwspaper to sound his praises. But analyse him and you will find he is 'an arrant ass,' or a 'huge hypocrite.' * 'His colleague, Murphy, fity described him as 'a sneak and a dollar-hunter,' whose idea of political success consisted in 'attingliniang.' He talks of his principle, how does he display it? Seven years ago when the dread 'Frinity Bay disaster or curred he left his constituents to perish on the drifting lee-fice, while he smoked his cigar at his warm fireside. * 'Overweening vanity and self-conceit are his best developed traits. The Montred pournalist sized him up who worde three years ago: 'He has a bad case of swelled head and has to get his bat on with a shee hern. He has a servile group who fired is a A. fensive writings, is the same Bond who backs Editor Parsons in his vile work of slandering our noble figures in Church and State. But, enough of Bond's past! Now a word of the present! He had better let us alone or he will be hurt. He tried a fall with us before and came out worst, and this is only a foretaste of what is to come if he unwarrantably meddles with us in the future."

I quote this for two reasons, first, as a typical example of what a St. John's paper will say about a man who is to Newfoundland what John Hay is to the United States. He is by birth and by his possession of inherited wealth a gentleman in the quasi-English sense in which the word is used here; and also, I am sure, in the sense in which it is used with us at home. In fact, the objection which his political opponents have to him is that he is too much of a gentleman. They complain that he does not mingle with the people and they call him the "curied darling." He has represented the colony at London and at Washington. Yet he is not safe from such assaults as this.—Boston Transcript.

The train left White Horse at 9 o'clock a, m, with five passenger coaches filled and two baggage cars. Everything ran smoothly to the summit and the heavy train started on the down grade. The tunnel was entered and the engine, two baggage cars and four coaches had safely passed over the high trestle just west of the tunnel and over 300 feet deep when the forward trucks of the last coach jumped the track. The rear trucks stayed on the track.

The last coach, with the wheels of the forward trucks bumping along the ties, just reached the opposite side when over tipped the chach, hanging on the end of the hill, with a 500-foot, chasm beneath.
